Baker Botts Staff Awards

E. Ernest Goldstein Award

In Honor of
E. Ernest Goldstein
1918-2008

The E. Ernest Goldstein Award recognizes a Distinguished Alumnus

Ernest Goldstein's work in international law spanned government service, teaching, and private practice. His interest in restricted trade practices, from the perspective of anti-trust law and the law of intellectual property, stemmed from his undergraduate studies with Professor Colston Warne, co founder of the Consumers Union. The role of the rule of law in fairness and equity, whether in economics or civil rights was always at the forefront of his thinking.

After he graduated from Amherst College in 1939, he began studying law at the University of Chicago. World War II interrupted his studies. He taught himself cryptography with books from the University of Chicago, advised the War Department he had done so, and found himself working as a cryptanalyst for the Army Security Agency at Arlington Hall, where he helped to break coded German naval communications (for which he received the Legion of Merit). He received his law degree from Georgetown in 1947.

He joined the Justice Department's Office of Alien Property, where he helped ferret out secretly owned subsidiaries of I.G. Farben, Bayer, and other German companies that had been implicated in the Third Reich. He then worked as counsel to Senate and House committees; the first, investigating organized crime, and the second, baseball's reserve clause. From Capitol Hill, he went to Paris, first as a restrictive-trade practices specialist to the U.S. mission and later, as the U.S. representative to the Productivity and Applied Research Committee of the Organization for European Economic Cooperation.

In January 1954, Ernest Goldstein returned to the United States, and after receiving an S.J.D. from the University of Wisconsin, began teaching, in the fall of 1955 at the University of Texas School of Law. He taught International Law, Anti-Trust, and Patent, Trademark & Copyright Law.

His work advising the UT students who had sued to integrate the dormitories and advising Students for Direct Action, who were trying to integrate the movie theaters on the Drag had him steadily in hot water with the Board of Regents, among others, but Dean Keeton and the faculty as a whole were staunch in his support. In 1965, he founded the Texas International Law Journal.

In 1966, Professor Goldstein left Austin to practice with Coudert Freres in Paris. While he was doing copyright work for Marlon Brando on Last Tango in Paris, President Johnson summoned him to Washington to work as a Special Assistant to the President. He had a broad portfolio of assignments and in the international arena, he was responsible, among other things, for maintaining the White House's relationship with the embassies of developing nations and dealing with the "gold flow" issue, as well as the beginnings of a treaty addressing the rights of nations in outer space.

Returning to Coudert Freres at the end of LBJ's term, Ernest Goldstein had an extraordinary practice that included doing copyright work for David Oistrakh, Pablo Picasso, Salvador Dali, patent litigation for Bausch and Lomb, and German Ford. In 1979, he moved to Switzerland and did work for CBS that included reforming the distribution of record royalties in Europe. In 1992 he moved back to Austin and on occasion taught as adjunct faculty at the law school and advised the Ransome Center on copyright matters.

He was very proud of the years he taught at Townes Hall, of helping to bring Karl Fulda to the faculty, and of the many students with whom he continued to exchange letters long after he stopped teaching. He would be thrilled that the Texas International Law Journal has chosen to name an award in his memory.

This Year's E. Ernest Goldstein Honoree
